CASTELLANE'S FLOWER BALL Count Boni de Castellane excelled himself in the gentle craft of the manmilliner when he designed the "flower ball" with which he and his American wife dezzled Paris the other night. Women as symbols of the garden and conservatory, men, in chromatic evening dress-such was the leading idea of a fete that was carried out on a scale of splendor made possible by the millions of the late Jay Gould.

It was preceded by a dinner to which were bidden 130 guests of various nationalities. Every person present was dressed fantastically. Each woman represented a flower. The men did not represent anything in particular, but they were bright colors.

The Countess was arrayed as a poppy. She wore a short skirt and succeeded in not looking self-conscious about She looked very well. Her gues's whispered among themselves that the Count had designed her costume.

Nothing could have harmonized more kindly with the Countess's black hair and eyes and almost sallow complexing than the red flowers in the wheat

Glesm redder than drops of blood On a dead king's golden mail.

The Count himself was a dream-a vision in pale yellow. His eatin coat was almost the nue of his blond hair, which stood back from his forehead in fetching waves. Like the rest of the men, he wore knickerbockers. His were of ivory white moire. The pretty modeling of his calves was set forth by

Madame reserved the place of honor at her right for an Euglish duke. It was His Grace of Manchester. Hs poyish but dissipated face smiled vacuously over a pale blue cost and a siffron colored waistcoat. His knickerockers were black satin.

Among the women were roses of various kinds. Mrs. Marshall, of New York, for example, was a red rose; Mrs. Edwin Gould was a pink rose; Mrs. Michael Herbert was a white rose; Mrs. Kingsland was arosebud.

Mrs. Arthur Paget wore a superb cosume symbolic of the Egyptian lotus. The Duchess de Rochefoucauld, a tenler study in pale blue, presented an emblem of the forget-me-not. Madeline Lemaire was an orchid; Mrs. Engene bount de Castellane had created a garden of women. The modistes had ap plied themselves to the study of hortiulture in order to reproduce it in fabrics, and the result was beautiful. As or the men, they made a brave effort to excel Solomon in all glory. The least imposing of them all, chromatically, was an American -Edwin Gould, the hostess' brother. He was the only one in modern evening dress, but he had so far made a concession to his brother-inlaws's desire as to have his coat lined. including the revers, with yellow satio. plicity," but a witty American woman pointed out that it was not the demoratic simplicity of Jefferson, who went o a ball in Philadelphia in all the splendor of a sky-blue coat, crimson waistcoat, yellow plush breeches and pink silk stockings.

The decorations and illuminations were lavish and artistic. In this branch, oo, the count had exhibited his taste for pretty things, and the countess amiably accepted the compliments called forth by his success. It was not to be thought such an ambition on the Count's part should escape the attention of the socialists. They have begun to murmur at the "flowe ball" as an insidious attempt to restore the manners and customs of royalty.— Paris letter to New York World.

DOES IT PAY TO BUY CHEAP? A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the ONLY remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschee's German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to de-stroy the germ disease, but allays itflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Recommended many years ago by all druggists in the world. For sale by Ernest L. Allen, Claud M. Lennon, Warfield & Hall, Charles G. Lennon, W. F. Creighton & Co., and Richard
